Democrat Standard Bearer Hurls His Campaign Across Plains

ASSAILS THIRD PARTY

Air of Certainty now Marks Candidacy of Davis in Western Addresses

(By the Associated Press) TOPEKA, Kans., Sept. 13 .- With apparently mounting confidence John W. Davis carried his fight for he presidency across the western plains today through Nebraska and Kansas in a series of addresses beginning before breakfast at Kerney Neb., in a driving rain and ending tonight in the capital of the Sun-

He came to Judith one day seriousfaced, thoughtful-eyed.

"Look here, Judith," he began abruptly, "I'm no outsider just looking on at this game. You're the chief owner and the boss and I'm not kicking at that any longer. Your dad raised you to this sort of thing and you have a way of getting by with it. But, on the other hand, I'm part owner and you've got to consider me."

Judith smiled at him. "What now, Pollock?" she asked.

PRESENT SESSION LAST FOR COURT

Supreme Court Personnel to Undergo Change at Next Session

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 13-The present session will be the last for several members of the Oklahoma supreme court, two of whom were defeated for their party nomination at the primary and three returning without seeking party preference. Of the nine members of the tribunal, five will be newcomers when the court assembles in January, 1925 for its first session after the November election.

Unless a political upset occurs eight of the members will be democrats and one republican. George N. Nicholson of Sulphur from district five will be the lone republican if politics follows its usual course and districts nominally democratic elect their candidates. Frank L. Warren of Holdenville who succeeded F. E. Kennamer when the latter was named to the federal bench is the other republican member of the court. He did not seek nominat- letter, impaling it on her file. ion. J. W. Clark of Atoka, democratic nominee, probably will suc-

Never had the man lost the stinging sense of his offense against her; never had Judith condescended to be anything but cool and brief with him. While no open reference was made to what was past, still the memory of it must lie in each heart, and though Lee held his eyes level with hers and drank deep of the warm loveliness of her, he told himself angrily that he was beneath her contempt. The chivalry within him, so great and essential a part of the man's nature, was a wounded thing, hurt by his own act. The old feeling of camaraderie which had sprung up between them at times was gone now; they could no longer be "pardners" as they had been that night in the old cabin. He told himself curtly that he did not regret that; that now it was inevitable that they should be less than strangers since they could not be more than friends. That the girl was ready to forgive him, that she had never been as harsh with him as he was himself, that there was a golden, delicious possibility that she should feel as he did-so mad an idea had not come to Bud Lee, borse foreman.

A few days after Marcia's arrival there came to the ranch a letter which was addressed:

Hampton reined his horse in closer, staring frowningly at the old cattleman. The purplish color of rage mounted in Carson's tanned cheeks.

DUESSELDORF, Germany .- The housing shortage in this city shows

What of Tomorrow?

What will be your financial condition twenty years from today? Ten years; five years; or even a year from today. Will you have plenty of this world's goods? Will you be independent? Will your declining years be amply provided for? How will you work out your dreams for the future of your children?

What will be the condition of your health? Will you still have an earning capacity? Will you still be able to hit the job six days every week? Will the Saturday night pay envelope be sufficient for the needs of yourself and family?

The future must ever remain a mystery. We cannot tell, with any degree of certainty, just our state of being will be tomorrow, or in exactly what condition our daily affairs may be.

There is only one safe, sane way in which to vision the future. That is from the protecting shadow of a LIFE INSURANCE POLICY in some SAFE, CON-SERVATIVE OLD LINE COMPANY.

LIFE INSURANCE will eliminate the hap-hazzard element in your future. It will provide for your family in case of your death; it will provide for your needs in your declining years when you have ceased to have an adequate earning capacity; it will afford protection against accidental disabling injury; it will enable you to establish a credit reserve for emergency use during your lifetime, available even at times when ordinary commrcial credit is difficult for the average man to obtain.

LIFE INSURANCE will give you a better credit rating in the business world. The fact that you are the holder of a policy will make you just that much a better credit risk, enabling you to make business connections that might not otherwise be possible.

LIFE INSURANCE is an invaluable asset from every possible standpoint you can figure it. You cannot afford to be without it.

"I don't know. Sometimes I think he does. But you know how generous he is. He never says anything, or avoids the subject of his cousin in any way." She added, after an instant: "Ned knows that I don't . . . love him-that is, in one way. He says he is ready to wait till that comes."

"Ned Kilmeny is a man out of a million. Wait. Give yourself and him a chance. In a few days we'll be started home."

"That's what I've been telling myself. Everything here reminds me of-him. It will be different then, I try to think. But-down in my heart I don't think it will."

"And I know it will," the matron told her promptly. "Time, my dear, heals all our woes. Youth has great recuperative powers. In a year you will wonder how he ever cast such a spell over you."

Moya heard the last belated reveler pass down the corridor to his room before she fell asleep. When she awoke it was to see a long shaft of early sunshine across the hed.

She rose, took her bath, and dressed for walking. Her desire drew the steps of the young woman away from the busy street toward the suburb. She walked, as always, with the elastic resilience of unfettered youth. But the weight that had been at her heart for two days-since she had learned from Jack Kilmeny's lips that he was a highgrader-was still tied there too securely to be shaken away by the wonder of the glorious newborn day. Returning to the hotel, she met a

"What is it that you think? Tell me," she cried softly.

"You're his friend, aren't you?" "Yes."

You don't need to worry about him at all. When he wants to turn up he'll be on deck right side up. Don't ask me what his play is, for I don't know. It may be to get me and Verinder in bad with the miners. Just be sure of one thing: he's grand-

She laughed. "I did think perhaps you knew where he was."

"Well, I don't-and I don't want to," he snapped. "The less I see of him the better I'll be satisfied."

The superintendent of the Verinder properties had found a note addressed to him in one of the sacks of quartz taken from Kilmeny. The message, genial to the point of impudence, had hoped he had enjoyed his little experience as a holdup. To Bleyer, always a serious-minded man, this levity had name was a red rag to his temper. Moya spoke a little timidly. "Wait a minute, please, Mr. Colter. Let me talk with Mr. Verinder alone. I think he'll tell me what you want to know." Jack's friend looked at her with

"Then I'll go and get Mr. Bleyer." "Just as you please. I'd see this ruffian at Halifax first, if you ask me." The angry color flushed his face again as he thought of the insult to which he had been subjected.

To Colter Moya explained her pur pose. He nodded agreement without words.

After two or three attempts she got the superintendent on the telephone at the Mollie Gibson mine and arranged with him that he was to come to the hotel at once. A few minutes later he drove up in his car.

Moya put the case to him. Bleyer turned to his employer. "You want me to tell Colter what I know?" "I don't care a turn of my hand whether you tell the fellow or not," drawled Verinder, ignoring the presence of Colter.

The superintendent peered at Moya in his near-sighted fashion over the glasses on his nose. "Can't see that it matters much, Miss Dwight. Farquhar and Captain Kilmeny left next day for another short hunting The captain had offered to give It up, but Moya had urged upon him that it would not be fair to disappoint his companion. He had gone reluctantly, because he saw that his fiancee was worried. His own opinion was that his cousin Jack had disappeared for reasons of his own.

It had been understood that the Or, by G-d, I'll wring your neck for young women should take a trip through the Never Quit before they left Goldbanks, but for one reason or another this had been postponed until after the captain and Farguhar had started on their final hunting expedition. The second afternoon after their departure was the one decided upon for the little adventure.

Verinder, with the extravagance that went hand in hand with an occaabrupt desertion of her, had watched sional astonishing parsimony, had orwith amazement the subsequent flare- dered oilskin suits and waterproof up. Now she crossed the porch boots made especially for his guests. A room was reserved for the young ladies at the mine, equipped for this "None of your funeral, ma'am," the one occasion to serve as a boudoir The mine owner's guests donned, was a little terrifying to be shot so rapidly down into the blackness of "Don't be afraid. It's quite safe,"

Bleyer told them cheerfully. At the tenth level the elevator stopped and they emerged into an open space.

"We're going to follow this drift," explained the superintendent. They seated themselves in ore cars and were wheeled into a cavern lighted at intervals by electric bulbs. Presently the cars slowed down and the occupants descended. "This way," ordered Bleyer.

They followed in single file into a hot, damp tunnel, which dripped moisture in big drops from the roof upon a rough, uneven floor of stone and dirt where pools of water had occasionally gathered. The darkness increased as they moved forward, driven back by the candles of the men for a space scarce farther than they could reach with outstretched hands.

Moya, bringing up the rear, could hear Bleyer explain the workings to those at his heel. He talked of stopes. drifts, tunnels, wage scales, shifts, high-grade ore and other subjects that were as Greek to Joyce and India. The atmosphere was oppressively close wore seemed to weigh heavily upon her. She became aware with some annoyance at herself that a faintness was stealing over her brain and a mistiness over her eyes. To stendy herself she stopped, catching at the rough wall for support. The others, unaware that she was not following, moved on. With a half articulate little cry she sank to the ground.

When she came to herself the lights had disappeared. She was alone in the most profound darkness she had ever known. It seemed to press upon her so ponderably as almost to be tangible. The girl was frightened. Her imagination began to conjure all sorts of dangers. Of cave-ins and explosions she had heard and read a good deal. Anything was possible in this thousand-foot-deep grave. In a frightened, ineffective little voice she cried out to her friends.

Instantly there came an answerfaint tapping on the wall almost at her ear. She listened breathlessly, and caught again that faint far taptap-tap-tap-tap-tap. Instinctively her hand went out, groping along the wall until it fell upon a pipe. Even as she touched this the sound came again, and along with it the faintest of vibrations. She knew that somebody at a distance was hitting the pipe with a piece of quartz or metal.

Stooping, she found a bit of broken rock. Three times she tapped the pipe. An answer came at once.

Tap-tap-tap-tap-tap-tap-tap! She tried two knocks. Again the response of seven taps sounded. Four blows brought still seven. Why always seven? She did not know, but she was greatly comforted to know that her friends were in communication with her. After all, she was not

A light glimmered at the end of the tunnel and moved slowly toward her. Bleyer's voice called her name. Presently the whole party was about her with sympathetic questions and explanations.

She made light of her fainting attack, but Verinder insisted on getting her back to the upper air in spite of her protests. He had discovered that Joyce was quite ready to return to the sunlight, now that her curiosity was satisfied. A very little of anything that was unpleasant went a long way with Miss Seldon, and there was immense grave.

LITTLE ROCK RESENTS APARTMENT PROJECTS

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 8.-The power of the United States District court has been invoked by a Memphis, Tenn., corporation in an effort to prevent the city of Little Rock from enforcing a zoning ordinance which would prohibit the erection of a seven story hotel apartment building within a few hundred feet_of the state capitol

Arkansas is proud of her magnificent state house, which sets on a hill overlooking the city, the Arkansas river and historic Fort Root across the river. Several acres south and west of the new capitol have been acquired by the state and made into a park, but the legislature has postponed action to acquire land north and east of the building which was contemplated to round out the capitol grounds. Recently the Tennessee corporation purchased several of these lots and announced its intention to erect a large apartment which would overlook the capitol and even tower above the huge dome of the state house. Immediately a movement was stanted by those who said they sought to maintain the beauty of the capitol and grounds to prevent the erection of the building. This culminated in the passage of a city zoning ordinance, prohibiting the erection of buildings more than three stories high within certain prescribed limits near the capitol.

The apartment corporation answered with a petition in federal court asking for an injunction to restrain the mayor, aldermen and other city officials from enforcing the ordinance.

It is very seldom that it means more than a few years at most, if the convict has friends on the nature. It is not fitting for us to harshly condemn the peooutside to work for his release. People soon forget the revolting details of a crime and are more ready to feel sympathy for the criminal than for the ones against whom his crimes were committed, hence the lifer feels confident that he will be out in a few years. There are two kinds of politicians: the kind who needs the salary of the office and wants to render a service in return and the kind who wants the salary and all he can make on the side without rendering any service. The first kind generally makes a campaign of a high order, giving facts and honest opinions. The second kind tries to array prejudice to cover up his own weakness. The second kind should be elected-elected to stay at home and the first kind permitted to serve.

We need a good road to Pontotoc and Connerville. There is a great country down there, one which produces much on the farms and ranches. Those people as a rule want to come to Ada, but the bad roads compel them to go to other places most of the time. The road should be improved at once and give those people an opportunity to come here.

A meeting of Democratic women held at Tulsa a few days ago was the scene of some acrimonious talk in which one of the bunch advised another that she should have stayed at home and kept her mouth shut. Who said women are not apt pupils in the school of modern politics?

A LOST OPPORTUNITY.

It has long been a proverb that no man is a hero to his valet. A man can be the idol of his nation and of world wide renown, but the valet who is always with him and sees him every day does not share in the adulation of those who see him at longer range.

Similarly a man often becomes noted in regions far from his home before those around him have seen anything unusual around him. They may feel a pride in having such a citizen among them but still they cannot refrain from remarking: "I knew him when-.

The case of Jesus was not different from others. His name was on every tongue in Galilee following his great sermons to the multitudes and the miracles performed which excited varied emotions among those who beheld them. Naturally the people of Nazareth, where he grew to manhood, heard of the fame which one of their former townsmen had herald the event. This is the first achieved and perhaps felt a touch of pride in him, but that he was anything more than the son of Joseph, the carpenter, the super-circus. and that he himself had worked as a carpenter never occured to them. They had known hims from his infancy and beyond ing on one hundred double length being a steady and thoughful youth, obedient to his parents railroad cars specially designed to FEAR THOU NOT; for I am with thee; be not dismayed; and of pious tendencies they could not believe him much cluding 800 of the greatest men and

> This is a strong illustration of the perversity of human Friday night with Miss Bertha Hagple of Nazareth for their action, for we see the same thing Mrs. Lucy Brown of El Reno and going on around us every day. Jesus is still knocking at the hearts of men but they reject him just as did the people of Nazareth. With some it is a matter of waiting for a more convenient season and this never arrives. THE True Blue Oakland Sedan is built for L people who know that the kind of a closed car they want cannot be built to sell at an open-car price.

It is built for those clear-thinking men and women who look straight through a "closedcar" label to the body that carries the label.

For people who want a car built to definite ideals of quality without any compromises.

This Sedan has style—sparkling, heart-warming, captivating style. It has a body structurally identical with the closed bodies of cars in the three thousand dollar class.

All Oakland bodies, closed or open, are built by Fisher to the same uncompromising standard of excellence.

This body is finished in Duco from top to bottom—a beautiful lustrous finish that will stay that way.

 "Rich" and "Lean" Gasoline Mixtures

There is nothing mysterious about the terms "rich" and "lean" mixtures. A rich mixture is one with too great a proportion of gasoline to the amount of air, whereas, a lean mixture is possessed of less fuel than it should have for proper combus-

An overrich mixture will cause overheating of the engine. to say nothing of carbon accumulation and such other ills as preignition, loss of power, lack of accelerative ability and loading up at low speeds.

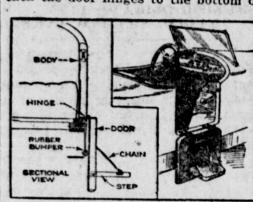

At high speed a lean mixture will cause misfiring and uneven running of the motor. In connection with this improper operation there will be the familiar popping in the carburetor.

Of course, these troubles cannot always be charged to incorrect mixture, but nine times out of ten such incorrect operation can be traced to it.

Step on Racing Car Is Combined With the Door

In the construction of speedster bodies it is desirable to avoid any projections on the sides of the car, as For this reason a car owner, who was building a speedster, combined the step with the door, as shown in the il-

A Novel Combination of Door and Step for Speedster Where a Flush Appearance Was Desired: The Step Drops Down When the Door Is the door instead of to the side, as usual. Upon opening the door, the small aluminum step automatically drops down and is held by means of two small chains. When closed, the chains are entirely out of sight and the step is flush with the covering on the inside of the door. Apart from the improvement in appearance obtained with this type of door and step, much less work was involved than if both had been constructed separately. -Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Locking the Car

Many modern cars are fitted with a battery ignition system, in which the distributer arm is removable. By removing this arm the car owner makes it possible to steal his vehicle only by towing it away or by fitting another distributing arm. The arm may be removed simply by unclasping the distributer cover to which the wires are attached. It usually happens that there is only one way in which this arm will fit, so that there need be no worry about replacement.

Go Too Far to Right

There is a noticeable tendency among drivers to leave too much room between cars when passing each other at night. The tendency to drive too close in day time is carried to the other extreme at night. Much of this is due to the fact that a driver unconsciously allows for a full car width in the belief that the other car extends much further out toward the center of the road than is revealed by the headlights.

GERMAN WRITERS GLEEFUL OVER OLYMPIC DISPUTES

(By the Associated Press)

BERLIN.-German sport writers greeted with printers' ink cheers the news that the the Olympic games in Paris this summer aroused some criticism in the United States and that a movement had been started in England proposing that the British refrain from further participation in the contests.

"Frankly," says one writer," it is a case of sour grapes so far as the Germans are concerned, because Germany was not invited to take part in the games this year.'

Considerable space was devoted by the German press to the Paris games the sport news frequently appearing on the pages mostly devoted to politics and the writers pointing to the lack of enthusiasm among the crowds, and much attention was given to every disputed point where ever the contestants or judges dis-

25,000 FARMERS UNITE TO PRAY GODS FOR RAIN

KIOTO, Japan-More than 25,000 farmers participated in a prayer ceremony held recently in Funai county, Kioto prefecture, to pray to the ancient Shinto deities to send rain. Drought has been threatening the western and southern part of Japan with serious rice crop short-

The drought is causing quarrels among farming communities in various part of southern Japan, where the water supply is inadequate. The governor of Kumamoto prefecture has been asked to act as referee between two villages which are quar relling over the right of one higher up the stream that runs through both, to dam the stream to get water for its parched crops.

DAKLAND LINE OUT

Landau Sedan Latest Creation Of Oakland Genius

A new addition to the Oakland line-the Landau Sedan-is announced by the Oakland Motor Car company, Pontiac, Mich.

The new car combines the individual of the Landau type with the practical serviceability of the sedan. It is finished in Buckingham gray with red striping, special plush mohair upholstery to match, nickel trimmings and black fenders. Double bar bumpers in front, fender guards at the rear, nickeled head and cowl lamps and aluminum running board apron shields are touches of brightness in keeping with the richness of finish and completeness of every refined detail of appointment.

The new Fisher one piece ventilating windshield is a feature affording open vision and snug protection, yet sliding upward when needed to give a full sweep of fresh air across the entire width of the driving compartment.

The car is equipped with balloon tires, has Oakland Duco finish, methese break the streamline appearance. trols centralized on the steering colchanical four wheel brakes, all conumn, automatic spark control and is powered by the smooth, dependable Oakland six-cylinder L-head engine. Lanchester Balancer Adopted by Willys-Knight is Acclaimed Automotive engineers and mechanical experts are impressed by Willys-Knight's new refinement, the Lanchester Balancer, in eliminating vibration. Read these comments.

Glenn Curtiss

Famous Airplane Inventor

"It is surprising. I drove the car (Willys-Knight Sedan) at all speeds up to 50 miles an hour and found absolutely no vibration."

W. E. Best

Works Manager, Remington Cash Register

"The smoothness of the motor was a revelation. The driver increased the speed from 15 miles an hour to approximately 45 miles and, as far as I could detect, with no vibration. It would seem that the balancer is doing the trick and gives sixcylinder operation as far as smoothness is concerned."

Hiram P. Maxim President, Maxim Silencer Company

"The Lanchester Balancer certainly takes out the vibration. It makes the motor smoother than most of the six and eightcylinders on the road today."

Maurice Olley Rolls-Royce, Production Manager

"From the demonstration there is no doubt that the elimination of the inherent harmonic vibration, by means of the rotating balancer, has been attained in practice to a degree which is very satisfactory to the passenger."

Willys-Knight scores again. To its famous sleeve-valve engine, that improves with use, it adds a perfection long sought by many motor cars—the elimination of sibration.
